Losing a parent, your dear dad, is so difficult. He loved you all of your life. And with this love, he taught you so many things. But, he could not teach you how to live without him. This you must learn on your own. Family and friends and memories will be there helping you through the grieving process. Believing that you will see him again will also help when you miss him the most. Be strong and choose to be happy--as he would have wanted you to be. You still have your life to live...and then you will embrace again.

I remember him being our milk man when I was little as well. I was always excited when he would bring the meadow gold orange dream bars! And the bingo Christmas parties at his place were the best! My daughter Jacey would tell me every year that it was her favorite Christmas party we went to! We love you grandpa and will miss you! Until we meet again! ❤️ Tell grandma Joyce hi!

My earliest, and some of my best memories of grandpa were when he would deliver small Meadow Gold chocolate milks to us every week, boating and fishing, then we cooked the fish over the fire, and going golfing with he and my dad (mike), and I was the little caddy pulling the clubs around the course. I love him, his smile and his laugh that will never be forgotten. I love you, Grandpa... until we meet again. ❤️

Golfing with grandpa was always fun for me. He spent more time teasing me on the course than he spent golfing. I wouldn't have had it any other way, and I loved to tease him back. Love you grandpa!
