Kendall Woods (Yellow Haired Son) posted:

Jim was my second father. No less significant than my real father. Just came into my life when I needed even more direction. Even though it was the same direction. Both of my fathers Bill Woods and Jim Poindexter both believed the same ways. Both had the same standards and survived because of who they are. I love both as they fight the hell of cancer. And wish only to be as strong and truly men as they are. I will always cherish the Josie wells tributes he gave me. And the name yellow hair son. Due to his native heritage. I am so blessed to have known this man. And even more proud to have learned things especially in my later years. When a second opinion was needed. I know my father fully backed anything my second said. Because he met and loved him from day one. As well as my mother approved too. Some of my favorite things he always told me were. A mans gotta realize his limitations. You can only change what you can. The hardest thing in your career to handle or manage is people. All are true and for real. I love this man with all my heart and soul. I will remember and keep with me his teachings and blessed teachings. I will always take care of my brother and sisters his children. I love them all. Thank you all of you for accepting me as his yellow hair son. I love you to the moon and back.
