Dennis Eugene Agle Jr

FEB 4, 1959 - JAN 25, 2026

Dennis Eugene Agle, Jr., 66, passed away on January 25, 2026.

Dennis was born on February 4, 1959 in Phoenix, Arizona, to Dennis Eugene Agle and Carol Jane Price. He spent eight years of his childhood living on Oahu, Hawaii while his father worked for what was then called Church College of Hawaii and loved his time there. From Hawaii, he moved to Cedar City, Utah where he graduated from High School.

After serving a mission for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in the Montreal, Canada mission, speaking French, he moved to London, England. While there he met the love of his life, Suzanne Lesley Tyler, while performing in a road show together. Their duet in the show was entitled "Eternity is You". They were married on December 12, 1981 and enjoyed 44 years together.

Dennis earned his Bachelor's degree from the University of Utah in Mass Communications and Advertising. After graduating from college, he began working for a public relations firm in San Diego, California. He also had many entrepreneurial endeavors throughout his career including a bank consulting business with his brother, writing and directing the Liken the Scriptures series, and founding the Hive Collaborative theater with his brother. Most recently he had worked as media production manager at Deseret Book.

Among the things Dennis will be most remembered for are his devotion and love for his family and his faith, as well as his creativity and eloquent writing.

He is survived by his wife, Suzanne, and their three children: Danielle (Spencer) of Stansbury Park, Utah; Katie (Daren) of Orem, Utah; and Alexandra (Curtis) of Orem, Utah. In addition, he is survived by his five grandchildren, and many loving cousins, nieces and nephews.

I've never really thought of myself as a writer. I've written a few poems and even a song once, but I've never felt like I was very good at putting feelings into words in a way that feels adequate. But I've had a lot on my mind lately. Ever since I learned of Dennis's passing, I've moved through a flood of emotions, memories, and thoughts. It wasn't until his funeral today that I truly understood just how much I loved and respected him. I met Dennis when I auditioned for Liken The Scriptures: One Smooth Stone. He and Aaron Edson ran my audition and offered me the role of Shammah, one of David's brothers. I loved working with Dennis and Ken. During that time, I met Suzanne on set and fell in love with her and their girls almost immediately. I also grew close to Ken's daughter, Aria. I loved their families and the production so much that I spent as much time there as I could. I built sets, cleaned, and helped with whatever needed doing. That was when Dennis and Ken offered me a job at One South Studios. The challenge was that I lived in Ogden and the studio was in Provo. Without hesitation, Dennis and Suzanne offered to let me stay in their basement apartment during the week while we were filming. So I moved in. I grew to love Dennis and his family deeply. I was welcomed into their lives in a way that was quiet and unassuming, but powerful. They had a way of showing me I mattered without ever making a big show of it. That meant more to me than I can say. I got a front row seat to watch how their family worked. I watched how Dennis and Suzanne parented their girls with calm, steadiness, and intention. I paid attention. I learned from them. I even called Suzanne later for advice on how they handled things like allowance with their kids. The influence they had on me as a father is real and lasting. Dennis was steady and solid. He was like a boulder in a river. Everything rushed around him, but he didn't get swept away. In the chaos that comes with production, he was constant and grounded. He was present. He always had a quick wit, thoughtful advice, and that smile. The one that, if you know, you know. Over the years, I stayed in touch with the Agles. I've always loved getting Suzanne's Christmas letters and hearing about their lives. Their family, Ken's included, has remained beloved to me. They welcomed me during a strange season in my life and made me feel normal, valued, and loved simply by being who they are. So many beautiful and true things were said about Dennis today. I could go on forever, but the one thing that stands out most to me is this. Dennis was present. Always. His awareness gave him insight. That insight became humor, wisdom, patience, and unconditional love, especially in moments when many of us might react too quickly or too harshly. The highest praise I can give Dennis is this. He was and is a great husband and father. I can think of no greater legacy. His writing and creative work are significant and meaningful, but even those accomplishments pale in comparison to the beauty he leaves behind in Suzanne and his daughters. My greatest hope is to be the kind of husband and father he was.

I had the greatest opportunity of living in their basement apartment while filming Liken. Though I doubt Suzanne or Dennis knew it, I watched how the parented and tried to absorb everything because I wanted to be a dad like Dennis. I hope....I hope I am. To the Agle family (all of you) I love you. I'm here if you ever need me.

I know Dennis from the Scera theater. I had the privilege of being an angel in "Liken's First Christmas" all three years it was performed there. I thoroughly enjoyed working under his direction to bring his beautiful vision to the stage. He is a kind & talented man, and I'm grateful our life paths crossed. His creativity touched many people!

Uncle Dennis has always been a great listener. From being forced to watch mine, Katie and Alexandra's dance rendition of the end credits scenes of Shrek 2 (probably 30 times) to whenever I would come to visit my dad at work (he was there of course) he'd attentively listen to me ramble. He always made me feel important and that he had time for me, despite being very busy. I loved making him laugh and felt like it was the biggest accomplishment as he had the best sense of humor. Working with him as stage manager on Lost Works was one of the biggest highlights. We would come up with fun jump poses and he was always the best sport. So lucky to be his niece!

I met Denise while serving my mission in London. His family were such a huge influence in the area. Then many years later Stuart became good friends with Alex and when she told me her last name was Agle I was so excited and all the memories came flying back. What a tender mercy. I can't believe the news that you have left this world. Your life has so much meaning and the lives you and your family have touched will forever be such a blessing. To Suzanne and Alex, you are loved and I'm so sorry you have had to say goodbye for now. Meg McGraw

I'm so sorry to read this. I know that Dennis has had some severe health challenges over the last few years. I will miss his comical and insightful social media posts. His humor and faith in the face of adversity. Dennis was our Home Teacher in the Chula Vista 3rd Ward. We both had young families and Dennis' lessons were engaging and fun. We last saw Dennis a number of years ago when we ran into each other outside his office in Provo. Instant connection, like 20 years really hadn't passed. We will miss our Christmas card exchange. Gone way too soon. Much love to Suzanne and the girls. Brian and Colleen Hervey and Family
