Layne Newman lit a candle in honor of Edward.

Edward was always a person that was searching for truth. It was a lifelong quest for him which endowed him with much knowledge. I always enjoyed our times spent talking about new understandings that he had acquired. He was an inspiration to me for searching out my own path of uncovering life's realities and truths. Edward was about the only other person, other than my wife, that I felt understood how I thought and what my life philosophy was. I will miss the time spent with him. Edward truly had great empathy for his fellow man. He was always trying to develop ways to help others live in a better society. One that is truly free where all can develop their personal gifts without the interference of others. This was a lifetime quest for him. And let it be said of Edward - He loved freedom. He was a patriot and truly walked the walk and wasn't just talk. And that wasn't always easy. He has always been an inspiration to me concerning freedom and truth. I will miss our time together. Edward, you were always trying to create an utopia and now you can enjoy yourself there. We love you Edward. Layne and Julie Newman

Jim Thorpe lit a candle in honor of Edward.

I had many good memories with my good close friend Edward. As one of Edward's closest friends Edward always challenged my thoughts and feelings, and a lot of my ideas. He was a deep thinker and would analyze everything around him with the candid ability to solve problems. We had many ventures to gather. I was one of the few. That knew him better than most people ever did. I knew how deeply he loved every one of his family members. His journey was very thoughtful, especially for those who were homeless or had less. He did not have much himself in this life, but what he did have he always shared with those less fortunate. He had a strong presence in my life and as a good friend, we had many ventures together, whether it was practicing martial arts together or working on special projects to help the children he had a strong desire to make sure children got fed that they were protected he had a strong desire to want to solve the problem of traffic, children and women. He was an idea, man a man with wonderful ideas. Even though, later on in life he's health did not allow him to accomplish his full potential. Mr. White Eagle fly to the heavens, be among the Eagles on high, in the nest among the great minds. One of my fondest memories of Edward though their were many One of my fondness was occasionally playing golf with him it wasn't about the game. It was about sharing ideas and philosophy that happen frequently one time he shared something with me while playing golf that he learned after he had been fasting for seven days only taken in water. What he shared was too sacred. to share fully here at this time but he had a deep, profound understanding of women and the pain that men cause through the words that they say, I came to understand through what he shared with me that women truly do feel pain emotionally and physical pain, by our insensitivity through the words that we speak. That had a profound impact on my life. Jim Thorpe (Windrunner) my friend (white Eagle) May you rest in peace.
