“ Jesse joined my crew when I was looking for players for a Starfinder RPG internet game on Roll20, just under a year ago or so.

And he always had interesting takes and when he laughed it was quite bold and fun and put a smile on our group faces.

And every once in a while he talked about his daughter and his Girlfriend a bit to and they were the lights in his life, it seemed to me now that I think about it.

Can't begin to say how much the guys and I will miss him and my deepest respects and sympathy for everyone here.

I hope somewhere up there he is still playing Role playing games and looking down on us when we play to perhaps :)

He gave us a good time and comradeship in most every session he played in with us and I was damn glad to get to know him a bit.

You will be very much missed by us bud!! Keep rolling those critical 20's up there my friend.

“ I knew Jesse as "Otho" in our weekly Starfinder Game. He was always such a joy to game with. Always face death in our game all the time, but when it happens for real, well... Jesse, Otho, I will leave with this poem I found years ago.

There is an empty chair, at the table this day.

A hallowed place where, a friend once played.

The roll of his dice, my ears long to hear.

Or perhaps it would suffice, if he should suddenly appear.

With character sheet in hand, and a bag of Cheeze-doodles to share.

All his friends would stand, as he sat in the empty chair.

I hear his voice a-callin', and it ties my heart in a knot.

For he cries, "Though a comrade has fallen, You must play for those who cannot."

We conquered worlds on the run, he and I in the name of fun.

And as others may come and go, I make both friend and foe.

But what I long for most, is our past now long a ghost.

“ I found my home in your arms. Your love and strength were one of a kind and I will never be the same because you shared them with me. I love you, Jesse. I always will.

“ I bought my grandpa’s MG Midget, and went for a joyride with Jesse. He’s the only person I took in that car, because it died on my way to dropping him off at home. I never got it to run, so he stayed the only passenger I ever had.

I have countless great and fond memories with Jesse. I’m lucky to know him.

“ Jesse was always quick to have a kind word, and a hug. He was a gentle man with a big heart. He was good dad, a good friend, and a good cousin. Jesse I will miss you and I will look forward to seeing you waiting on me at the clearing at the end of the path.
