“ My mother was a strong and independent young women. She cared about everyone she met. She was a total badass but a total softy. She loved my brother, sister, and me with everything that she had in her and gave us all that she could. She never stopped believing that it would get better. i know that even though it has been 5 years, she is still with us all each and everyday.

The other day i was walking down the street when out of no where a dime fell. i have no idea where it fell from because i didnt have any dimes. i picked it up, and i have this weird thing about looking at the dates on coins. However this date caught my eye, 2015. I knew it was a sign from her because it fell from out of no where.

Now although 5 years have gone and passed, that doesnt mean i dont think about her everyday still. I mean she was my mother. I think she just wants everyone to know that she is still watching over us and she still cares. And that as the 5 year anniversary of her death comes around that we all need to cherish the time we have with the people we have. Because if you were close with my mom (as i was) you would know that one day everything may be just fine and the next the person you care about most could be gone fr good.
