The youngest child of William S Dustin and Sarah Adelaide "Addie" Morley, she was born on October 1, 1933 in Price, Utah. Wilma was often called on to help her siblings care for their families and consequently spent her childhood in many places throughout Idaho and Utah, having a particular fondness for the time she spent in Driggs, Idaho. After retiring from the railroad, the couple traveled, visiting in St. George and with various family members for a couple of years before moving permanently to Washington, Utah. They enjoyed 25 years there together, the longest time that they had ever spent in one place. They remained there until very recently when they went to West Jordan to live with their son, Larry.

Wilma was best known as a dedicated wife and mother who labored for and served her family tirelessly. Wilma is survived by Weston, her husband of 65 years, and two sons: Kerwin D. Hill (and wife Debora) of Caldwell, Idaho, and Larry K. Hill (and wife Jennifer) of West Jordan, Utah.
